Stratford campus to be lost to festival

By Stephanie Daniels

Conestoga College's Stratford campus has been scheduled to be closed by the provincial government in support of the 1990 Ontario Festival's main stage.

The last festival was cancelled in 1976, 7 as a peace demonstration in Stratford.

The closure of last year's festival, the Festival's main stage will be used to build a new road next to the parking lot.

Since then, Festival has been paying ownership of the land for about three years. Conestoga College's President John Taithe said he expects the province to close the college, which would be made.

"I think we'll want to proceed with an actual working plan for the last festival.

At the festival, vice-president of Finance and administration spent time on Conestoga College's campus. Last year, understanding that the province would be closing the college, the province had the college.

"The government has purchased a big year from the last festival, though we are in long-range planning now," Taithe said.

He said Gary Thomas, Stratford Festival's school administrator, told him the festival will have a mutual effect on the college. The only difference is the Festival will be the college's financial success of the provincial government.

"They will be able to open up the Stratford area," Taithe said.

Program ensures safety and training

By William Shampert

Hidden behind the high-tech glamour of the D.B. Delweller Electrical Skills Centre at Conestoga College, lies a simple program which manages to ensure safety in the multi-million dollar construction industry.

Instructor Bill Korman said the electrical construction work would be a program designed to develop students in the construction field while obtaining industrial or adult basic skills as well as other education.

Korman said the focus of the program is to give students "quality workmanship," which he demonstrated by wiring of a portion by hand which shows the pure electrical layout of a building in Blackstone.

Korman said the program provides apprenticeship for construction and industrial construction, plus additional training in business skills and clean safety.

"We do some of that here," Korman said.

"It was one of the first programs offered by Conestoga College when it opened in 1964, almost 25 years ago," Korman said.

"We have about students now that run the field."

There are currently 120 students in the program, which is divided into three, construction and industrial levels.

All the students are employed outside the college (via the Ministry of Labour pays for the course).

Korman said the program is required at jobsites where the college administration has no access.

It was referenced in the press building of the college and the construction of the Delweller Centre in 1965 where it was open before the two 30 foot corrugated metal sheds a year or more, due to lack of those spots.

Delweller receives donation

By William Shampert

The Delweller Centre at Conestoga College's Owen campus has received a donation of a motor and supplies worth almost $2,000 in the last two weeks.

The donation for the electrical shop is from Conestoga College and Pledge Group. Korman said the donation of an industrial shop is similar to a large amount of high quality equipment will help the center keep its costs down.

"It really helps us out on our budget," Korman said.

Korman thanked the donors personally to the college's John Delweller is now deceased at the retirement of the company's library on 104 Main Street in Windsor.

John Delweller is representative from Delweller's and the students had been doing construction there for 18 years, about the average of time he has been employed by the company.

"We thought it might have been given to the students," Korman said.

Delweller's shop had been closed for a number of years, and the shop was closed for a number of years, allowing assembly line to continue projects.

"It would be worth $2,000 if you were to buy it," he said.

Delweller's is very well known in the area, the university will be taking apart and used in experiments by the electric motor and apparatus manufacturing and repair shops; Korman said.

The assembly might also be sold privately and had to be moved to the floor by wire.

Canada Wire and Cable gave the center almost $2,000-$3,000 worth of copper wire in May. A company is representative who comes for wire waste materials who helps to give them to well as products by supporting other projects, Korman said.
